I FUNDAMENTALS

USD · rates · the Fed

A sharp fall in stocks, then payrolls.

The S&P 500 CFD fell 4.94% on Thursday and the VIX rose 42% to 25.09 (MT5). DXY closed little changed at 101.48. The latest 10-year real yield was 2.64% (4 Nov, FRED); a nominal 10-year print was not verified that morning. (The VIX measures expected US equity volatility.)

Reports on December Fed pricing conflicted, between about 67% and 81% for a hike (CME FedWatch as reported on 5 Nov). Today's payrolls report is the main release of the week.

WHAT WOULD CHANGE THE PICTURE

A move back above $4,073.23 would return price to the 20-day average; a break below $4,035.88 would extend the pullback towards $4,000.

V OUTLOOK

24–48h scenarios

Payrolls arrive after a week of large moves in gold, the dollar and stocks.

SCENARIO A

Scenario A: if payrolls disappoint and yields fall, gold could reclaim $4,073.23 and retest $4,100.

SCENARIO B

Scenario B: if payrolls beat and the dollar rises, gold could test $4,000 and the 23 Oct swing low at $3,975.71.
